

Allan ROSSER PSQA

Soon after I began work I joined that now diminishing group whose first camera was a Box Brownie. My next camera was a second hand Kodak Retinette 1A. These days I use a Canon 7D mk2 with a range of lenses, and an R7. And of course my smartphone, just updated to a Samsung S23 ultra.

I am just an ordinary photographer, a member of the Australian Photographic Society since 2006, a member of the Toowoomba Photographic Society since 2010 working my way up to Salan Grade. I have a PSQ Judge for about 5 years. For our club competitions I enter prints, and my favourite format, black and white, has done quite well, and continue to do so.

I enjoy macro photography and have taken hundreds of macro photos of Kimberley wildflowers, but I would have done better if I had ventured into focus stacking, and that I have just started to do with the R7. Many my earlier wildflower photos were taken with a small point and shoot camera to which I had affixed a close-up lens. Some of these flowers were less than 5mm across. I had an article about that printed in the Australian Photography Magazine.
