I am an enthusiastic amateur photographer, having bought my first SLR camera (an Olympus OM2) back in 1976 when I was working in a tax-free location and could afford to buy a new lens every week if I wanted to. I soon got into colour developing and quickly learnt that the image you take with the camera, although an essential component, is only the start of the process of producing an image to be proud of.

My photographic journey since then has been interrupted by the demands of family and work life and I have only in the last few years been able to come back to it.

There is no specific genre of photography that I focus on and am happy to have a go at everything and anything that takes my interest.

I enjoy entering club and open competitions as a way to improve my photographic skills.
